Course Outline/ Course Objectives (授業の概要・到達目標)
Course Objective: To learn about epidemiological research articles by participating in a “journal club” where students learn about the critical examination of epidemiological research.
Objectives: To be able to critically read epidemiological research articles of all different study designs.
Class outline: Two or three meetings will be held in May and June 2023, with the schedule to be arranged for the course participants. The participants will search PubMed for literature using PI(E)CO as the search term. Select one article with the highest level of evidence and critically review it using STROBE for observational studies, CONSORT for intervention studies, and PRISMA for systematic reviews and meta-analyses. When you are ready, contact your faculty member (to be determined during the brainstorming session) individually to make a presentation. The faculty member will record the presentation and send it to the Journal Club mailing list.
