Course Outline/ Course Objectives (授業の概要・到達目標)
Course Objectives: For optical microscopy using visible light, this course teaches what defines resolution, numerical aperture, depth of focus, image brightness, and field of view, and teaches actual operation by observing paraffin sections. In the same way for fluorescence microscopy, the characteristics of fluorescent materials and the principle of obtaining images will be explained. For an electron microscope that uses an electron beam instead of visible light, the principles of transmission electron microscopy and scanning electron microscopy will be explained, and students will learn how to operate such microscopes by observing actual specimens. Course Goals: The goals of this course are to teach the principles and characteristics of optical microscopy, fluorescence microscopy, and electron microscopy, and to teach students how to operate such microscopes.
